box-decoration-break: clone on a box split across two pages

Each page gets the whole box: its border, padding, rounded corners, shadow and background. The padding and border take room on both pages, so the text stops above the bottom edge and starts again below the top edge.

Line two of the text that runs on to the next page.

Line three of the text that runs on to the next page.

Line four of the text that runs on to the next page.

Line five of the text that runs on to the next page.

Line six of the text that runs on to the next page.

A cloned note inside the box, which the page break splits too.
Its second line.
Its third line.

Its fourth line, on the next page below the edges of both boxes.

The end of the box.

After the box.
